Elegant dining and an evening of entertainment will be the setting in the Appomattox County High School cafeteria March 5. The Home Economics Advisroy commitee in Appomattox County has made plans to sponsor a dinner theatre to raise money for the Madeline Thomas scholarship fund. The dinner will begin at 7:00. Featured on the menu is chicken fricase. For entertainment the ACHS Chorale under the direction of Steve Lawrence will present several musical numbers. Also several members of the drama club will present "The Storm", under the direction of Joyce Sweet.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for children.

Earlier that week, March 2, the cast of "The Storm" will compete in the seminole district one-act play festival at William Campbell High School. They will be competing against a number of schools in the seminole district. According to Mrs. Sweet, "The Storm" is a serious drama dealing with the effects of guilt. Jeff, played by Toby Brennen is a man who has been involved in an accident during a snowstorm. A woman and her daughter are killed as a result of the accident. Everytime it snows, Jeff regresses into feelings of guilt. Other cast members are: Jeff's wife mary, (Susan Morris), a hunter (Bruce Sanders), a woman, (Terri Nash) and a young girl, (Dawn Pitsenberger). Good luck to them in competition.

Winter is ending at ACHS and spring sports are starting to begin. Atheletes at ACHS are warming up for golf, tennis, softball, baseball, and track. Some coaching changes have taken place this season. The FOOD WORLD Story

From a Small Grocery Store in 1917 into a 48 Store Chain in 1982

Mr. G. E. Hutchens, Founder

THE EARLY YEARS

The Company's founder, GEROGE E. HUTCHENS, came to High Point, North Carolina, from Patrick County, Virginia, in 1915. He worked in a local grocery store for two years, and in 1917, opened his own store, known as Hutchens' Grocery. During that time he married the former Elizabeth Lineback who worked with him in the store.

IN 1925, EXPANDED TO 10,000 SQ. FT.

The store prospered, and in 1925, Mr. Hutchens had his store enlarged to 10,000 square feet. The store had in addition to the normal grocery line, a complete on-premise bakery and delicatessen. In these early years the grocery business was operated on a credit and delivery basis which necessitated an array of telephones for incoming orders and three delivery trucks.

AHEAD OF ITS TIME

It was in the mid 1920's that Mr. G. E. Hutchens had his first experience with self-service. He acquired the Basketeria grocery in High Point, which he operated unsuccessfully for one year and was closed. At this time self-service was unknown and had not gained popular acceptance.

EXPANSION

In 1929, National Food Stores, Inc., was incorporated as a related business. This Company operated several small orange front stores and by the middle 1930's had grown to thirteen in number. During this period a National Food Store was opened in Greensboro but was soon closed. It was also during this period that the old Guilford Wholesale Grocery Company was acquired to supply this new chain.

SELF-SERVICE COMES OF AGE

It became apparent by the middle thirties that self-service supermarkets were going to be a factor to be reckoned with. After studying several successful operations in the north, Mr. G. E. Hutchens decided to embark into this revolutionary new phase of retailing. This new type of retailing operated on the principal of self-service; no charge, no delivery, low mark-up, and high turn-over. The first such supermarket was opened in 1937, in High Point, North Carolina. It was the second in the state following by a few months, one that was opened in Greensboro by the Pender Company. Mr. G. E. Hutchens chose as the name for these new stores, "Big Bear". From the beginning it was highly successful. With this proof, he began to close the older, smaller stores and replace them with larger, self-service Big Bears. It was during this period that stores were opened in Asheboro and Winston-Salem.

THE WAR YEARS

By the outbreak of World War II all of the smaller stores had been replaced with supermarkets. During the war, expansion came to a standstill, all efforts being concentrated on keeping the stores operating during these trying times.

After the war, four new stores were opened; two in High Point, one in Winston-Salem, and one in Thomasville. In 1948, Big Bear achieved another first with the introduction of self-service meat in North Carolina.

MODERNIZATION

During the early 1950's the Company went through a period of digestion. It added an IBM Inventory Order and Control System in its central office during this time. It added a new department to its operation . . . health and beauty aids.

GROWING AGAIN

In 1954, the Company opened the first Big Bear in Greensboro, in the Lawndale Shopping Center. This was the biggest store yet and served as a prototype of stores opened in 1955, 1956, and 1957, in Winston-Salem, High Point, and Asheboro.

By 1955, the Company had outgrown its warehouse and offices on Tomlinson Street, so a site was acquired on Courtesy Road in High Point. Modern, automated warehouses were built and opened in 1956. All merchandise, including groceries, health and beauty aids, dairy items, frozen foods, and produce, was bought and warehoused here pending distribution to the stores. In addition, the executive, accounting, and buying offices were located here.

Growth again made the company look for even larger warehouse facilities . . . and a more suitable distribution location. A site near the Regional Airport in Greensboro, N.C. was chosen because of it's excellent accessability to interstate and other major highways. A huge 299,000 square foot headquarters and grocery warehouse complex is now in operation in Greensboro with the company's frozen food / produce warehouse remaining in High Point, N.C.

In 1957, the Company acquired one of the state's largest independent supermarkets, the Humpty-Dumpty Super Market in Burlington, North Carolina. Soon after, the Company acquired the Cone Mills Company Stores, all of which were liquidated except one on Fairview Street, which was operated pending the completion of Northeast Shopping Center. This Center was opened with a Big Bear Supermarket in 1959. Another new Supermarket was added in 1960 in High Point. During the next two years, plans were made to open two more new stores. In 1963, one of these stores occupying 25,000 square feet. (the largest in the Piedmont) was completed in High Point. The next store, several months later, was opened in Winston-Salem, occupying 18,000 square feet. Both stores proved to be highly successful. Plans for further expansion were realized in 1964. That year saw the opening of our Big Bear on Market Street in Greensboro.

EXTRA SERVICES NEEDED

In 1965, service departments had to be expanded to supply the fast-growing chain. In 1981, the opening of a new 299,000 square foot warehouse in Greensboro, N.C. was necessary in order to keep abreast of the company's expansion.

FOUNDER PASSES AWAY

In 1965, the Founder of the Company passed away, but the same beliefs and principles on which he built the Company remained the philosophy of his sons and daughters who continued to operate the chain.

The year 1966 marked a growing year for the Company. The College Plaza Shopping Center, located near Wake Forest College, was built in Winston-Salem. This Big Bear was designed to give employees the most efficient working conditions, and to the public the most pleasant atmosphere in grocery shopping. With this in mind a remodeling program began with the Big Bear in Thomasville being the first. This remodeling program was designed to continue over a period of several years. At the same time the four Stop and Shop Stores in Winston-Salem were acquired. This boosted the total number of Big Bear Supermarkets from thirteen to seventeen.

FOOD WORLD ENTERS THE PICTURE

In the late 1960's, it was obvious that the grocery retail trend was moving toward "Total Discount Operations". Based on this trend the first Food World Discount Store was opened in High Point, in 1970. The major difference in this new discount store was single unit grocery pricing and total discount pricing on name brand products. Trading stamps and consumer games were not offered at the new Food World and straight down-the-line discount prices were offered. Food World was an overnight sensation and more stores were built. In February of 1974, a complete name change to Food World was made and the name Big Bear phased out. With acquisition of the 12 King's Supermarkets in the Lynchburg area, the company now operates 48 Food World stores across North Carolina and southern Virginia. North Carolina locations are: High Point, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Asheboro, Burlington, Eden, Reidsville, Raleigh, Laurinburg, Lumberton, Wilson, Rocky Mount, Smithfield, and Fayetteville. Virginia locations are: Danville, Roanoke, Christiansburg, Lynchburg, Altavista, Appomattox, Amherst, Forest, and Bedford.

The phenomenal growth of the Food World chain from a small grocery store in 1917, is just another of the many success stories made possible by our free enterprise system.

Local Study Indicates Prices Lower at Food World.

LYNCHBURG, VA. — "Food World's claim to "LOWEST PRICES" will probably be under constant attack by our competitors in Lynchburg," says John G. Hutchens, one of the Food World owners. "Our claim has been checked and rechecked," commented Mr. Hutchens, "but the ultimate test of its validty rests with the consumer."

"The Food World method really does mean more food on the table for less money, and that's the whole purpose for our existence and growth," added Hutchens.

A Food World sponsored spot check was conducted January 19, 1982 comparing Food World prices with King's and Krogers', in Lynchburg (the 2 chain stores that command the largest share of Lynchburg grocery business). The study offers evidences of Food World's lower prices. According to Hutchens, Food World's prices will save housewives 10% to 20% on their total grocery bill.

This brief comparison will give consumers an idea of the values that are at Food World. Hutchens pointed out that prices increase at Food World only when costs increase. "Even then," he added, "we will hold the lower price as long as possible."

"All we ask," Hutchens continued, "is that the shoppers in the Lynchburg area try Food World and see what we say is true."
